

Learning Outcomes Document for the Primary Grades Teacher Department:

- Mastering teaching methods in various sciences, especially those sciences that concern the department's graduates in the academic subjects that will be the field of his practical work, such as: Arabic language, Islamic education, English language, mathematics, and general sciences.
- Understanding, interpretation and accuracy of scientific observation through the breadth of scientific materials that the student will obtain during the study period in the department, and in a way that helps him keep pace with scientific development in teaching methods and assimilate them with the scientific material and how to perfect his work in the school class in which he will assume teaching tasks.
- Constructive scientific and practical communication of teaching skills and its present and future plans, and informing the student in this section of the most important gains of these skills to develop his own capabilities in the teaching profession, including expanding on the acquired experiences to increase that development in knowledge and performance.
- Developing the student's writing and speaking skills during the study period in this department, and encouraging him to manage the classroom in a way that demonstrates these skills and develops his abilities to convey information to the student in a scientifically accurate manner for any subject he is responsible for teaching.
- Learning research methods, writing, preparing class reports and specialized articles in teaching principles, methods, educational sciences, and even other sciences that fall within the specializations of the course and graduation requirements, as they are of utmost importance to the student of this department, and mastering these methods is a graduation necessity for the department's students in all its academic stages.
- Learning the arts of educational management and leadership for the new scientific generation or for the coming scientific generations by the graduates of this department throughout the academic years that they will spend studying in it. These arts are accompanied by specialized academic vocabulary and assistance that can be developed and distinguished, and in a way that satisfies the desires of the learner and develops the capabilities of his students towards correct understanding and sound education.